

Flintlock Blunderbus

by James Tampa

Flintlock Blunderbüs, a true Renaissance Land Pirate has been maintaining the safety of Bristol and any land he may roam for thirty and seven years now by keeping tides from overtaking the dry earth through constant bailing along the shoreline. He has a strange aversion toward water en masse, but tolerates rain to an extent. Keeping shorelines "safe from attack", Flintlock will frequently fire upon ships who stray too close to the main land. At one point in his fine career, he did manage to hit a passing ship, but it sank before making landfall, losing all its treasure to the depths below. The only treasure that washed upon the shore that day was a lovely tall hat, which he proudly wears upon his head.
